Rhinefield House

Rhinefield House has existed in its present form since 1880 but there have been dwellings on the site since the 'New Forest' was proclaimed by William the Conqueror in about 1097. By 1859 Rhinefield had become the abode of a Forest Nurseryman who was responsible for the creation of the Ornamental Drive and the planting of many conifers in Rhinefield.

Rhinefield passed to the hands of the Walker family, who owned Eastwood Colliery, immortalised in the novels of D H Lawrence. Rhinefield remained in the possession of the Walker-Munro family until crippling death duties in 1950 forced the house to be sold.

Following a period of uncertainty when various schemes proved unsuccessful, Oliver Cutts made considerable progress in refurbishing the house and grounds and bought the freehold in 1972. Rhinefield was eventually developed as a hotel and is now part of the Hand Picked Hotels group.

The oldest part of the house appears to be the fire-back in the central Grand Hall. The Great House was designed by architects Romaine-Walker and Tanner of London and incorporated a mixture of styles, both internally and externally.

The Alhambra room, the master's smoking room reproduces the splendour of the Alhambra Palace in Granada and took two years to build being an exact copy of the Palace. It was re-created by Mabel Walker-Munro as a Christmas present for her husband.

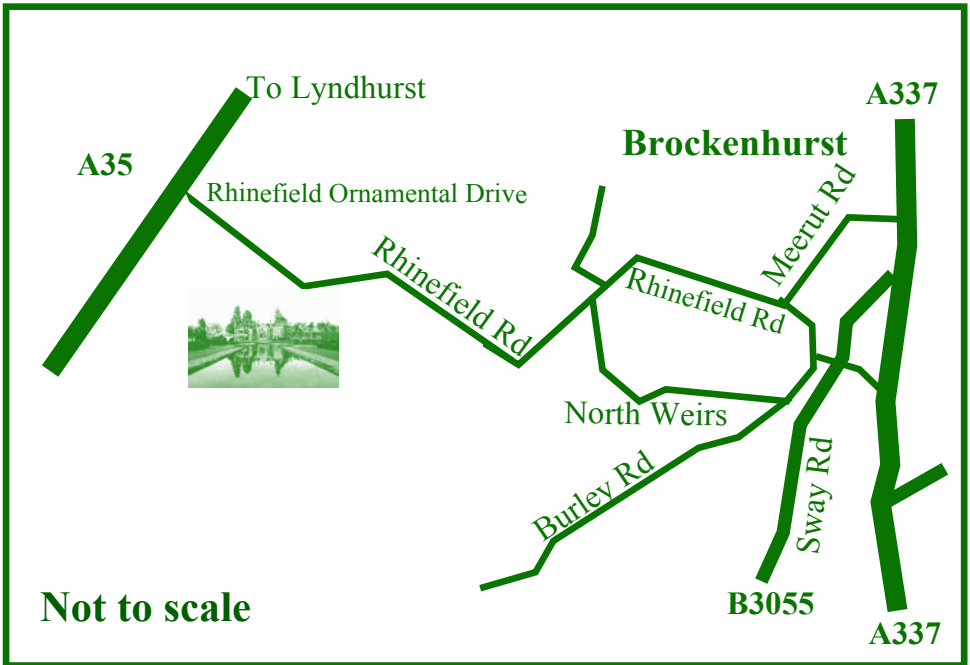

Other notable features are the Armada carving by Aumonier with a surrounding by Grinling Gibbons, a ceiling canvas by Fragonard, and the magnificent wood panelling throughout the house and the Orchestration, which occupies the organ loft in the Grand Hall.

Grateful thanks to Rhinefield House for allowing us to stage the Wessex & Jersey Area Show in such an historic and stunning building.
